

Done For You Traffic Siphons – Hundreds of Traffic Siphons You Can Implement Immediately

NOTE: Make sure you read through the original course before starting this – otherwise certain elements will be unclear. If you're handing this over to your outsourcer, make sure they do the same as well.

You clearly want to save yourself some time since you've purchased this offer, so I won't waste your time beating around the bush. Let's get to the goods! I'm going to give you A LOT of done for you traffic siphons I've setup in the past in a variety of niches.

I've been building my list of traffic siphons over the last couple years, exactly how I teach you in the course. If you want a head start on some great sites that I've used in the past without having to set everything up yourself you're in the right place.

I've organized them by niche and included the direct contact pages so you can just jump straight to the contact pages. The reason I'm not going to include emails is because I want this guide to stay up to date – emails can change (new staff people) – usually web page structures don't change – and many sites have particular guidelines you may need to be aware of.

Some of these websites will be more difficult than others to get a guest post setup on. But keep in mind that successfully getting a guest post on some of these sites that are big players in their niche can mean insane amount of traffic (sites like HuffingtonPost.com get tens of millions of pageviews per month accept guest post – how crazy is that?)

Another note from the spreadsheet, many of the sites will be cross listed in multiple categories, this is because they serve a variety of different interest on the site (i.e. a blogging site might also be about technology or business) so keep that in mind as you decide on websites to setup siphons on.

Develop a strategy and use these siphons to get started IMMEDIATELY. Save the spreadsheet and add to it as you discover more siphons. This is more than enough to get you started bringing in thousands of visitors per month though. I've built up this list of siphons and consistently use it to tap into loads of traffic. ALL of these websites accept some form of guest posting or another, otherwise they wouldn't be in this list. Also all of these sites are UNDER 100,000 in Alexa – meaning they get significant enough traffic to warrant going after.
